A DEVILISH TEMPTATION.

If the people of Louisiana are not humiliated until their mouths are in the dust, by the offer of the Louisiana Lottery man, then their souls are insensible to shame.
The brazen effrontery of the fellow passes all other examples of cheek. He has the assurance that is traditionally supposed to plate a Tammany politician; he has the meanness to laugh at the pitiable condition of the people due to the recent floods, and all the while to assume to be shedding tears of sympathy for their woes.The people of Louisiana, after suffering twenty years of the contamination of the lottery cure, resolved to put an end to the infamy, and gave the managers notice that at the expiration of the present charter no new one would be granted. For several months the scheming lottery gamblers have been doing all that money could aid them in doing, but without success, to bribe the Legislatures of other States to give them foothold on new territory. In the meantime a terrible flood visits the low lands of Louisiana; the father of waters bursts the bounds set for his way, and scatters death and desolation in the path of the torments he pours from his broken sides.
Ruin marks thousands of homes for its own, and the State goes into mourning for the sorrows of its people. At this juncture the devil in the guise of the lottery man appears upon the scene, and offers the unfortunate people all these things if they will fall down and worship him:"Permit me to detach the people under cover of your sovereignty for another twenty years, and I will pay you twenty millions of dollars, a round million each year. Nay, I will in your present distress pay some of the sum on the nail, spot cash. See what good you can accomplish with so much money. For your levees you shall have $350,000; for your public schools, $350,000; for your hospitals, $100,000; for your insane, $75,000; for your deaf, dumb and blind, $25,000; for the drainage of your metropolis, $100,000.
Thousands of homes have been swept away, and I think I ought to do what I can to ameliorate the consequent distress.
Repairs to the levees will do this, as the people can then rescue their plantations and homes from the flood, and I think that with my $350,000, I can insure yourselves against floods. I have long thought that the public school term should be made nine months of the year, and that the standard of the course of study should be advanced. I therefore will grant you $350,000 a year, and if you accept it, I advise that you get a new corps of teachers to supplement the lot you now have, since they teach as if their hearts were not in the work. New blood is needed to inspire the whole department, and my $350,000 will furnish it." And thus the tempter concludes:I have long since recognized that the city of New Orleans requires a new and better ten in order that the prosperity of her citizens may be assured. I have therefore provided in my offer a specific and most satisfactory amount sent annually for this purpose. I see very clearly that something must be done, done at once, to restore the levees which have recently been destroyed. I will give you a State sum for the purpose at once in order that this date and the expiration of the present lottery charter.Of course, as an intelligent contemporary remarks, a man who makes such offers as these must have both hands in the people's pockets. More than that, he must be robbing them to the backbone.
No wonder then that he offers such glittering bribes. No wonder that he can tempt the people of a gambling-ridden State as no other people were tempted before. It is very likely that this $20,000-000 bribe will for this modern Methu-saph. It is almost too much to expect of the Louisianaans that they will resist the temptation of the rascally bribe.
But if they have a fair sense of pride left that is superior to their woe, they will rise in their wrath and command this new Satan to get behind them. But if they grovel before him, and consent to exist as at his imperial will, they will be for the next twenty years, they and their children, the most pitiable spectacles upon the continent. Rather than that their acceptance of this infamous bribe to permit the vilest of gaming thievery should be recorded, the other States of the Union could afford to raise the gamblers' figures and offer Louisiana $25,000,000 to refuse. Of course such an idea is visionary, but were it possible of being made real, it would by no means be the part of wisdom, for it is wise to fight the devil with fire.

THE STORY OF A MOB.

Early in this month a negro lad named Leaphart was shot to death in a jail cell at Lexington, S. C., by a mob. The boy was confined on a charge of having violently assaulted a white girl named Rosa Cannon, aged 18. The mob was led by a man named Corey, in whose house Rosa was living. On the 6th an inquest was held, and the jury returned a verdict that the boy came to his death at the hands ofunknown persons, though it was proved before the jury, and not denied, that Coughman, Jones, Taylor, Seay, Kuyzer and Ogleby were active in the party that fired into the cell, and themselves discharged firearms at the lad. The mob thus identified only laughed when brought before the jury, and defied any one to convict them.The Governor of the State said he had respected the boy because of evidence in his possession that the lad was innocent, and that he had been, possibly, the victim of a conspiracy. It appears that the girl, after the trial, stated that the negro boy did not assault her; that he only asked for bread or money, and that when she refused it he threatened to choke her, or did choke her, saying he was hungry. The girl also wrote to her mother that she could not identify Leaphart as the negro boy who killed her.She wrote to her mother in addition that she was not assaulted, and her little brother, who was with her, also says that there was no assault committed upon his sister, nor could he or she identify the negro who asked for bread. The girl added in her letter that the man Corley told her it was Leaphart who had choked her, but she insisted that she could not identify him as the negro who had demanded food and money. The mother of the girl came after the occurrence to take her home, but Corey protested against it, and said the girl must not leave as it would prevent carrying out the punishment that was to be administered to Leaphart, as it would occasion "talk" to have the girl leave the vicinity. He wrote a letter also in which he protested against removing the girl.It turns out now that the jailer was notified when the jail was to be stormed, and that he was conveniently present to surrender the keys, whereas had he remained away or have locked himself inside, the mob could not have penetrated to the cell.
It develops also that Charley Cannon, an elder brother to Rosa, has filed an affidavit with the Governor in which he recites that his sister had told him secretly that it was untrue that Leaphart had assaulted her; that indeed she had not been assaulted at all. The rumor also prevails in the vicinity of the jail tragedy that the whole scheme of capturing and killing the negro boy was gotten up to cover the crime of another person.All of which is recited to illustrate the ways of mobs, and to show how dangerous is the appeal to violence. It is now believed in South Carolina that the boy Leaphart, so ruthlessly assassinated by the furious mob of two weeks ago, was innocent, and that he became the victim of the lies of the girl and possibly of the cunning and deviltry of the man Corley.
Leaphart was one of the despised race of color, and representative of a class that is small crime in some parts of the South to kill, if only a mere shadow of an excuse is trumped up; while to keep "that kind" from the ballot-box is rather esteemed a virtue in not a few sections. To make one of them a scape-goat for the crime of another is not, therefore, out of keeping with the local atmosphere in that part of the Union. But the story of the negro boy serves to emphasize how dangerous is the mob spirit; how unthinking such lawlessness as made Lexington the victim of a mob. It is agreed in that section that the mob should all the perpetrators of the outrage away, and there could not be drawn a jury to convict them in the county of the crime.
The spirit that actuated the mob inspires the people to a courage that is defiant of the law in shielding criminals despite the heinous character of their offense.MR. CLEVELAND in a recent letter exclaimed: "It is a glorious thing to be a true Democrat in these days." Ah! so he let us see. With the Democratic Treasurer in Maryland a defaulter; the Democratic Mayor of New York exposed as a corrupt; the Democratic Sheriff of New York removed for perjury, fraud and outrageous prostitution of Court presiding judges, so bad, indeed, that it was thought the right thing to do to send him to wear stripes a while; with Grand Sachem Croker, of Tammany, charged with being a boodler; with Democratic frauds and frauds in Kentucky; with Democratic rascality unearthed in Mississippi; with leading Democrats in Missouri in prison for malfeasance; with Democratic suppression of the negro vote in the South, surely it is a glorious thing to be a true Democrat in these days. But really, Mr. Cleveland, do you not truly think that they are good days also for the true Democrats to do a little bit of lying?An Illinois Court has decided that tabacco is not a necessary supply, and that a debt cannot be recovered that originated in such a supply being furnished to a minor. There is nothing novel in the decision—the wonder is that any one was fool enough to bring such an action.At Finlay, O., workmen struck recently for ice in their drinking water. All right, but imagine workmen in Europe striking for such a cause. There is a wonderful difference between the two hemispheres of the world, to be sure.PROFIT-SHARING has been introduced in the paper mills at Brunswick and West Newton, Me. The reform is rapidly spreading, and wherever introduced is the death-blow to that least desirable of all remedies —the strike.When a newspaper gets the catch-penny diseases of the circus it is time for self-respecting journalism to blush for the cause.Fraternal Visit.
Ethian Lodge, No. 37, I. O. B. B., received an official visit last evening from President Felix Menzies, Grand Secretary H. Enkle of San Francisco and Grand E. Steinman, D. J. Simmons, Rev. J.
Levy, L. Blank, and others.Subsequently the members of the Lodge and its guests sat down to a banquet at the French restaurant of Faure & Becker.
Remarks were made by the Grand President, E. Steinman, D. J. Simmons, Rev. J.
Levy, L. Blank, and others.Alleged Wife-Beating.
A telephone message came to the Police Station late last night to the effect that a drunken man at Front and G streets had been assaulting himself by beating the woman who is so unfortunate as to be his wife.A police officer hastened to the locality named, but the poor woman had probably been beaten into silence, and he could find nobody to direct him to the house of the drunken brute, her husband.Church Social.
There will be an entertainment this evening at the Central M. E. Church, on Eleventh street, for the benefit of the church improvement fund. A choice musical and literary programme will be presented by some of the best talent.MAMA (to her little boy): "Now, Bennie, if I give you one of Dr. Ayer's nice sugar-coated Cathartic Pills next time you drop off to sleep at once."

FIRE AT SPOKANE.

The Charred Remains of a Man Discovered in the Ruins of a Building.SPOKANE FALLS (Wash.), May 15th.—At 2:30 o'clock this morning a fire broke out in a three-story frame building occupied by John J. Stanford, brother of Senator Stanford, and himself a widely known politician in this State, died last night of heart disease at his home No. 1218 Oak street, Oakland, aged 75 years. Josiah Stanford was born in Watervliet, Albany county, N. Y., in 1817, and was the elder son in the Stanford family. He arrived in California in 1849, and became a merchant at Mormon Island. Subsequently he opened a large hardware house in Sacramento, and afterwards a large oil store in this city, which is still carried on by one of his sons. He made use of a superior business education in the rich field offered in this city during its early development, and amassed a fortune estimated at $1,000,000.
Besides owning a great deal of real estate in this city and Oakland, he was the owner of the well-known Warm Springs property located near San Jose. Most of his business had, some years ago, been placed in charge of his son, Josiah Stanford Jr.Mr. Stanford was a member of the City of California Pioneers, and took pride in the fact that he was one of those who laid the foundations of the State. To his influence is probably due the presence and citizenship in this State of the founder of the Stanford family, Mr. Stanford Jr., who was not only a successful business man, but was also a prominent politician, and was expected to be a candidate for some months prior to his death.The fire broke out in the second story of the building, and spread rapidly, and before the firemen could reach it the building was a mass of flames. The firemen did not stand it. They had no sooner come down than the fronts fell in, and in a few minutes the entire structure was burned to the ground. Dr. J. E. Gandy's one-story frame building on Second street, just feet from the burning building, was also destroyed. The fire spread rapidly on the west side of the street, and the fire was checked after the buildings had been partially burned.The firemen did efficient work considering the meager water supply. Sam Fryer, one of the men, had a narrow escape from death. He was at work in the lodging house over Hansen's saloon when he found a man in one of the rooms on the second floor suffering from suffocation. He grabbed the man by the leg and started to drag him to one of the front windows.
Just as Fryer reached the window the man broke into the room, and he had to abandon the man in order to save himself. He went to the ground and escaped with comparatively slight injuries. J. B. Connelly, a lodger in the house, finding escape by the stairway shut off, made for the front window and was killed. Mr. Connelly was the extent of Costello's injuries are not at present known, but it is thought that he has received serious internal injuries. May Maher, Thompson and John Sewall, all of the same house, received severe burns about the face and arms.The fire was caused by the bursting of a lamp. At 4:30 o'clock the charred remains of a man who was burned in the Lenore lodging-house were found in the ash heap.
It is also reported that an infant met its death in the same building. The exact losses are not yet known, but they cannot be far from $50,000.

DEATH OF JOSEPH STANFORD.

The Eldest Brother of Senator Stanford Died in Oakland.S. F. Alta, May 15th.— Josiah Stanford, brother of Senator Leland Stanford, and himself a widely known politician in this State, died last night of
heart disease at his home No. 1218 Oak
Stanford was born in Watervliet, Albany
county, N. Y., in 1817, and was the elder son in the Stanford family. He arrived in
this city, which is still carried on by one of
amassed a fortune estimated at $1,000,000.
